Marxism 95: A Revolution in Ideas

Marxism '95 is the major event of left wing political debate in Ireland. With nearly 30 meetings and debates, it runs from Friday November 24th to Sunday 26th.
This year's Marxism '95 has meetings on:

 The case for Revolution* Fifty years after Animal Farm: The Politics of George Orwell.* The Myth of Michael Collins.* World War 2: Was it a war for Democracy?* Can Greenpeace save the planet?* Trotsky's fight against Stalin* 150 on: The Politics of the Famine* Church and State in Ireland* Darwin and Human Origins* Freud, Madness and Civilisation* How do we make our unions fight* The Black Panthers and the American working class.

There is a debate between Eamonn McCann and a Sinn Fein speaker on: Where is the peace process going. There are also forums on Drugs and one on Can Art be political?

Marxism '95 is all about arming people with ideas for the struggles that are ahead. We live in a world where the amount of money spent on arms is equal to the income of half of the population of the planet.

Marxism '95 aims to show that socialism is relevant. It is organised by the Socialist Workers Party and gives an alternative vision of socialism to the state capitalist systems of Russia and the sellouts practised by the Labour Party.

HOW TO GET THERE

Marxism '95 opens on Friday November 24th and 6.30 in the Ormond Multi-Media Centre. This is situated at 16 Ormond Quay, just five minutes walk from O Connell St, Dublin.
